++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Showers, mainly north on Sunday. Very strong winds easing later.

Today:
Rain or showers in the north. Mostly dry, bright for Central, southern Scotland. Strong gusty west or northwest winds, locally severe gales in the north and east, easing during afternoon.

Tonight:
Showers across the northeast soon dying out to give a dry night with clear spells and light winds for many. Cloudier in the west later bringing patchy coastal rain.

Monday:
A dry, mild but increasingly breezy morning in the east. Strengthening winds and rain in the west. The rain spreads to all parts in the afternoon.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Breezy with showers north and west on Tuesday and Wednesday, drier and brighter in the east. Most likely dry with lighter winds much of Thursday, but rain expected later.
